EASTERN NEWS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Prisoners Murdered.

SHREVEPORT, August 31.—It is reported here that five prisoners, including a Sheriff, Deputy Sheriff and two Collectors, captured by citizens at Coushatta on Saturday night, were taken from the escort who were bringing them here, by fifty armed men supposed to be Texans, and killed. Later reports just received tend to confirm previous rumors and leave little room for doubt that the Coushatta prisoners were murdered at McFarland's plantation, 30 miles below here, on the east bank of Red river.

Indicted.

ST. LOUIS, August 1.—A number of men who went from Stanford to aid in suppressing the troubles in Lancaster were indicted by the Garrard county grand jury last week, and will appear to-morrow to answer.

All Quiet in Lee County

[illegible], August 31.—The Lee county, Alabama, fight has been very much exaggerated. No person was killed and only one church was burned. All now quiet there.

Steamship Constitution at Panama

NEW YORK, August 1.—The steamship Constitution arrived at Panama August 30th.

WASHINGTON CITY.

WASHINGTON, August 31.—The sugar cases in which the Bay City Refinery and Falkner, Bell & Co. of San Francisco are principally interested, and which were appealed from San Francisco to the Treasury Department at Washington, have been decided in favor of the Government. The decision involves $400,000 customs duties, which will be collected by the Government.

BY ATLANTIC CABLE.

The Carlists before Pingcerda Again Repulsed.

MADRID, August 31.—The Carlists made two determined but ineffectual assaults on Puigcerda to day and enraged at their repulse set fire to and destroyed houses outside the walls.

Mount Etna Pouring Out Lava.

ROME, August 31.—Mount Etna has been in a state of eruption since Saturday. Streams of lava are pouring from the craters.

Brigandage in Sicily.

ROME, August 31.—Several regiments have been sent into Sicily because of the increase of brigandage and general lawlessness there. Courts martial will be established for the prompt punishment of offenders.

PACIFIC COAST NEWS.

CALIFORNIA.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—At Schoolhouse station, about nine miles from this city, on the line of the San Jose Railroad yesterday, Domingo Ogara and Edward Knighby became involved in a quarrel. Ogara shot his antagonist, who sprung upon him and stabbed him twice, inflicting dangerous wounds, and then fell dead. Ogara was removed to San Mateo county jail.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—The Odd Fellows of this city propose to erect a new hall, and a committee of the order will report on the site for the new hall next Saturday.

The trial of Antonio Gonzales for the murder of Luis Romero was resumed in the Fourth District Court this morning. The trial will probably not be concluded to-day. There is a large attendance of Mexicans in the court room.

The [illegible], caused by the wreck of the ship [illegible], at the entrance of the harbor, has been fully removed through the agency of [illegible] and giant powder. The divers found only the bowsprit above the sand, and that was standing upright. The buoy marking the locality of this wreck will be removed.

Complaint is still made by the Sheriff of the overcrowded condition of the county jail, and several new wards are to be constructed at the branch jail.

Greenbacks unchanged.

The Deaf Mute School at Salem, under charge of Prof. Smith, will be opened on the third Monday of September. All pupils should be on hand at that time.

The Marshal of Salem made but four arrests during the month of August. One for neglecting to abate a nuisance, two for drunkenness and one for assault and battery. Salem is a good moral city.

The Union county Times says: "The Grangers during the week have been pretty active. Each Grange in the county has had its turn receiving a delegation from the several Granges. We understand that a council of Grangers for Union county will soon be organized."

One of the Salem editors darkly hints that he will dish up his contemporary for breakfast before long, unless the contemporary comes to "a full stop" in making personal allusions. A full stop means, according to our old spelling-book, until one can count one, two, three, four.

The following persons have been elected to represent Silver Lodge, I. O. G. T., of Silverton, at the State Temperance Union that convenes on the 15th inst.: Orla Davenport, Edna J. Brown, A. A. Leonard and Hon. W. Cranston. Alternates, Susie Dudley, Jones Wilbur, L. F. Moshar and John Hicks.

Bob Douglas, hostler for the Northwestern Stage Company at Rattlesnake Station, shot and killed an employe of the telegraph company at that place on Thursday morning last. We have received no particulars farther than that the two men had a quarrel, which ended in Douglas shooting the other man with a double-barreled shotgun. Rattlesnake, where the tragedy took place, is in Baker county, 25 miles from the Owyhee Ferry.

MR. BEECHER'S STATEMENT.

Inside History of the Great Scandal.

Circumstantial Explanation of the Famous Letters.

How the Great Plymouth Giant Was Snared by Two Boys.

A Forcible Argument and a Mournful Tale of Private Sorrow Concealed Through Long Years From the World.

Mr. Beecher's Statement Entire.

GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE—In the statement addressed to the public on the 22d of July I gave an explicit, comprehensive and solemn denial to the charges made by Theodore Tilton against me. This denial I now repeat and reaffirm. I also stated in that communication that I should appear before your committee with a more detailed statement and explanation of the facts in the case. For this the time has now come. Four years ago Theodore Tilton fell from one of the proudest editorial chairs in America, where he represented the cause of religion, humanity and patriotism, and in a few months thereafter became the associate and representative of Victoria Woodhull and the priest of her strange cause. By his follies he was bankrupt in reputation, in occupation and in resources. The interior history of which I am now about to give a brief outline is the history of his attempts to secure [illegible] to reinstate him in business, restore his reputation and place him again upon the eminence from which he had fallen. It is a sad history, to the full meaning of which I have but recently awakened. Entangled in a wilderness of complications, I followed until lately a false theory and a delusive hope, believing that the friend who assumed the [illegible] had determination and ability to control the passionate vagaries of Mr. Tilton, to restore his house, to rebuild his fortunes and to vindicate me, would be equal to that promise.

THE SELF-CONFESSED FAILURE

His self-confessed failure has made clear to me what for a long time I did not suspect—the real motive of Mr. Tilton. My narrative does not represent a single standpoint only as regards my opinion of Theodore Tilton. It begins at my cordial intimacy with him in his earlier career, shows my lamentation and sorrowful but hopeful affection for him during the period of his initial wanderings from truth and virtue. It describes my repentance over evils befalling him of which I was made to believe myself the cause, my persevering and finally despairing efforts to save him and his family by any sacrifice of myself not absolutely dishonorable, and my growing conviction that his perpetual follies and blunders rendered his recovery impossible. I can now see that he is and has been from the beginning of this difficulty a selfish and reckless schemer, pursuing a plan of mingled greed and hatred, and weaving about me a network of suspicious misunderstandings, plots and lies, to which my own impotent words and acts, nay, even my thoughts of kindness toward him, have been made to contribute. These successive views of him must be kept in view to explain my course through the last four years. That I was blind so long as to the real nature of the intrigue going on around me was due partly to my own overwhelming public engagements, partly to my complete surrender of this affair and all papers and questions connected with it into the hands of Mr. Moulton, who was intensely confident that he could manage it successfully. I suffered much, but I inquired little. Mr. Moulton was chary to me of Mr. Tilton's confidence to him, reporting to me occasionally in a general way Mr. Tilton's moods and outbreaks of passion only as elements of trouble which he was able to control, and as additional proofs of the wisdom of leaving it to him. His comment of the situation seemed to me at the time complete. Immersed as I was in incessant cares and duties, and only too glad to be relieved from considering the details of wretched complications, the origin and the fact of which remain, in spite of all friendly intervention, a perpetual burden to my soul, I would not read in the papers about it—I would not talk about it. I made Moulton for a long period my confidant and my only channel of information.

TILTON AN ENEMY

From time to time suspicions were aroused in me by indications that Mr. Tilton was acting the part of an enemy. But the suspicions were repeatedly allayed by his own behavior toward me in other moods and the assurances of Mr. Moulton, who ascribed the circumstances to a misunderstanding or to malice on the part of others. It is plain to me now that it was not until Mr. Tilton had fallen into disgrace and lost his salary that he thought it necessary to assail me with charges which he pretended to have had in mind for six months. The domestic offense which he alleged was very quietly and easily put aside, but yet in such a way as to keep my feelings stirred up, in order that I might, through my friends, be used to extract from Mr. Bowen $7,000, the amount of a claim in dispute between them. The check for that sum in hand, Mr. Tilton signed an agreement of peace and concord, not made by me but accepted by me as sincere. The Golden Age had been started. He had the capital to carry it on for a while. He was sure that he was to lead a great social revolution. With returning prosperity he had apparently no griefs which could not be covered by his signature to the articles of peace. Yet the change in that covenant, made by him before signing it, and represented to me as necessary merely to relieve him from the imputation of having originated and circulated certain old and shameless slanders about me, were really made, as now appears, to leave him free for future operations upon me and against me so long as he was or thought he was on the road to a new success. His conduct toward me was as friendly as he knew how to make it. His assumption of superiority and magnanimity and his patronizing manner were trifles at which I could afford to smile, and which I bore with the greatest humility, since I still retained the profound impression made upon me, as explained in the following narrative, that I had been the cause of overwhelming disaster to him, and that his complete restoration to public standing and household happiness was a reparation justly required of me, and the only one which I could make.

But with a peculiar genius for blunders he fell almost at every step into new complications and difficulties, and in every such instance it was his policy to bring coercion to bear upon my honor, my conscience and my affections for the purpose of procuring his extrication at my expense.

TILTON KNEW BEECHER WELL.

Theodore Tilton knew me well. He has said again and again to his friends that if they wished to gain influence over me they must work upon the sympathetic side of my nature. To this he has addressed himself steadily for four years, using as a lever without scruple my attachment to my friends, to my family, to his own household, and even my old affection for himself.

BEECHER IN THE NET.

Not blind to his faults, but resolved to look on him as favorably and hopefully as possible, and ignorant of his deeper malice, I labored earnestly, even desperately, for his salvation. For four years I have been trying to prune the insatiable egotism, to make the man as great as he conceived himself to be, to restore to popularity and public confidence one who in the midst of my efforts in his behalf patronized disreputable people and doctrines, refused when I besought him to separate himself from them, and ascribed to my agency the increasing ruin which he was persistently bringing upon himself, and which I was doing my utmost to avert. It was hard to do anything for such a man. I might as well have tried to fill a sieve with water. In the latter stages of the history he actually incited and created difficulties, apparently for no other purpose than to drive me to fresh exertions. I refused to indorse his wild views and associates. The best I could do was to speak well of him, mention those good qualities and abilities which I still believed him to possess in his higher mood, and keep silence concerning the evil things which I was assured and believed had been greatly exaggerated by public report. I could not think him so bad as my friends did. I trusted to the genius of good which I thought still lived in him, to Mr. Moulton's apparent power over him, and to the power of my persistent self-sacrifice. Mr. Moulton came to me at first as the schoolmate and friend of Mr. Tilton, determined to reinstate him, I always suspected, without regard to my interests, but on further acquaintance with me undertook and promised to serve his friend without doing wrong to me. He said he saw clearly how this was to be done, so as to restore peace and harmony to Mr. Tilton's house and bring a happy end to misunderstandings. Many things which he counseled I absolutely refused, but I never doubted his friendship for me. After friendship had grown up between us, whatever he wished me to do I did, unless it seemed to me wrong. My confidence in him was the only clue [illegible] that seemed [illegible] in that confusion of tormenting perplexities. To him I wrote freely in this trouble. [illegible] when I felt [illegible] secret [illegible] were going on around me, and echoes of the vilest slander concerning me were heard in unexpected quarters, when some of my [illegible] were set against me, and the [illegible] of [illegible] women hostile to me on other ground [illegible] to my ears, when I had lost the last remnant of faith in [illegible] or hope for him, when I heard with unspeakable remorse that everything I had done to stay [illegible] had made matters worse and worse, that my attempt to keep him from a public trial involving [illegible] flood of scandal as has now been let loose had been used by him to bring up new troubles, that [illegible] wife was under his dictation [illegible] papers and recantations, and I knew not what, that in short everything was breaking up, and the destruction from which I had sought to save the family was likely to be emptied on other families, the church, the community, with infinite horrors of woe for me, that my own innocence was buried under heaps and heaps of rubbish, and nobody but my professed friend, if even he, could save us. To his assurances that he could still [illegible] I gave at least so much faith as to maintain under these terrible trials the silence which he enjoined. Not until Mr. Tilton, having attempted through Frank Carpenter to raise money from my friends, openly assailed me in my letter to Dr. Bacon, did I break that silence, save by simple denial of the slanderous rumors against me a year later.

THE FIRST OPEN ATTACK

On the appearance of the first open attack from Mr. Tilton I immediately, within its coming, [illegible] Mr. Moulton, called for a thorough investigation with a committee of my church. I am not responsible for the delay, the publicity of the details of that investigation. All the harm which I have so long dreaded and have so earnestly striven to avert has come to pass. I could not further prevent it without a full surrender of honor and truth. The time has arrived when I can freely speak in vindication of myself. I labor under great disadvantages in making a statement. My memory of states of the mind is clear and tenacious, better than my memory of dates and details. During four troubled years, in all of which I have been singularly burdened with public labor, having established and conducted the Christian Union, delivered a course of lectures, preached before the theological seminary of Yale College, written the Life of Christ, delivered each winter lyceum lectures in all the North and West—all the duties with the care of the great church and its outlying schools and chapels, and the miscellaneous business which falls upon a clergyman more than upon any other public man—I have kept my regard, and now with the necessity of explaining actions and letters resulting from complex influences apparent at the time, I find myself in a position where I know my innocence, without being able to prove it with detailed explanations. I am one upon whom trouble works inwardly, making me outwardly silent, but reverberating in the chambers of my soul; but when at length I do speak, it is a pent-up flood and pours without measure or moderation. I inherit a tendency to sadness, the remains in me of positive hypochondria in my father and grandfather, and in certain moods of reaction the world becomes black and I see very despairingly. If I were [illegible] moods to speak as I feel, I should give false colors and exaggerate the proportions of everything. This manifestation is in such contrast to the hopefulness and courage which I experience in ordinary times that none but those intimate with me would suspect one so full of overflowing spirit and eagerness to have within him a cave of gloom and despondency. Some of my letters to Mr. Moulton reflect this morbid feeling. He understood it, and at times earnestly reproved me for indulging it. With this preliminary review I proceed to my narrative.

MR. BEECHER'S NARRATIVE.

Mr. Tilton was first known to me as a reporter of my sermons. He was then a youth just from school and working on the Observer. From this paper he passed to the Independent and became a great favorite with Mr. Bowen. When, about 1861, Drs. Bacon, Storrs and Thompson resigned their place, I became editor of the Independent, to which I had been from its start a contributor. One of the inducements held out to me was that Mr. Tilton should be my assistant and relieve me wholly from routine office work. In this relation I became very much attached to him. We used to stroll to galleries and print shops and dine often together. His mind was opening freshly and with enthusiasm on all questions. I used to pour out my ideas of civil affairs, public policy, religion and philanthropy. Of this he had often spoken with grateful appreciation, and mourned at a later day over its cessation. August was my vacation month, but my family repaired to my farm in June and July and remained there during September and October. My labors confining me to this city, I took my meals in the families of friends, and from year to year I became so familiar with their children and homes that I went in and out daily almost as in my own house. Mr. Tilton often alluded to this habit and urged me to do the same by his house. He used often to speak in extravagant terms of his wife's esteem and affection for me. After I began to visit his house he sought to make it attractive. He urged me to bring my papers down there and use his study to do my writing in, as it was not pleasant to write at the office of the Independent.

BEECHER AND THE CLEVELAND LETTER

When I went to England in 1863 Mr. Tilton took temporary charge of the Independent. On my return I paved the way for him to take sole charge of it, my name remaining for a year and then he becoming the responsible editor. Friendly relations continued until 1866, when the violent assaults made upon me by Mr. Tilton in the Independent on account of my Cleveland letter, and the temporary discontinuation of the publication of my sermons in that paper, broke off my connection with it. Although Mr. Tilton and I remained personally on good terms, yet there was a coolness between us in all matters of politics. Our social relations were very kindly, and as late as 1868-9, at his request, I sat to Page some fifty times for a portrait. It was here that I first met and talked with Mr. Moulton, whose wife was a member of Plymouth church, though he was not a member nor even a regular attendant. During this whole period I never received from Mr. Tilton or any member of his family the slightest hint that there was any dissatisfaction with my familiar relations to his household. As late, I think, as the winter of 1870, when going upon an extended lecturing tour, he said, "I wish you would look in often and see that Libby is not lonesome or does not want anything," or words to that effect. Never by sign or word did Mr. Tilton complain of my visits in his family until after he began to fear that the Independent would be taken from him, nor did he break out into violence until on the eve of dispossession from both the papers—the Independent and the Brooklyn Union—owned by Mr. Bowen. During those years of intimacy in Mr. Tilton's family I was trusted as a father or elder brother. Children were born—children died. They learned to love me and frolic with me as if I were one of themselves. I loved them, and had for Mrs. Tilton a true and honest regard. She seemed to me an affectionate mother, a devoted wife, looking up to her husband as one far above the common race of men, and turning to me with artless familiarity and with entire confidence. Childish in appearance, she was childlike in nature, and I would as soon have misconceived the confidence of her little girls as the unstudied affection which she showed me. Delicate in health, with a self-cheerful air, she was boundless in her sympathy for those in trouble, and labored beyond her strength for the poor. She had the charge at one time of the married women's class at the Bethel Mission school, and they perfectly worshipped her there. I gave Mrs. Tilton copies of my books when published. I sometimes sent down from the farm flowers to be distributed among a dozen or more families, and she occasionally shared. The only present I ever gave her was on my return from Europe in 1863, when I distributed souvenirs of my journey to some fifty or more persons, and to her I gave a simple brooch of little intrinsic value.

So far from supposing that my presence and influence was alienating Mrs. Tilton from her family relations, I thought on the contrary that it was giving her strength and encouraging her to hold fast upon a man evidently sliding into dangerous associations, and liable to be ruined by unexampled self conceit. I regarded Mr. Tilton as in a very critical period of his life, and used to think it fortunate that he had good home influences about him. During the late years of our friendship Mrs. Tilton spoke very mournfully to me about the tendency of her husband to great laxity of doctrine in religion and morals. She gave me to understand that he denied the divinity of Christ, the inspiration of the Scriptures and most articles of orthodox faith, while his views as to the sanctity of the marriage relation were undergoing constant change in the direction of free love.

THE [illegible] VISIT

In the latter part of July 1870 Mrs. Tilton was sick, and at her request I visited her. She seemed much depressed, but gave me no hint of any trouble having reference to me. I cheered her as best I could, and prayed with her just before leaving. This was our last interview before trouble broke on the family. I describe it because it was the last, and its character has a bearing upon a later part of my story. Concerning all my other visits it is sufficient to say that at no interview which ever took place between Mrs. Tilton and myself did anything occur which might not have occurred with perfect propriety between a brother and sister, between a father and child, or between a man of honor and the wife of his dearest friend. Nor did anything ever happen which she or I sought to conceal from her husband.

A CONGREGATIONAL PROTEST

Some years before any open trouble between Mr. Tilton and myself, his doctrines as set forth in the leadership of the Independent aroused a storm of indignation among the representative Congregationalists in the West, and as the paper was still very largely supposed to be my organ, I was written to on the subject. In reply I indignantly disclaimed all responsibility for the views expressed by Mr. Tilton. My brother Edward, then living in Illinois, was prominent in the remonstrance addressed to Mr. Bowen concerning the course of his paper under Mr. Tilton's management. It was understood that Mr. Bowen agreed, in consequence of proceedings arising out of this remonstrance, to remove Tilton or suppress his peculiar views, but instead of that Tilton seemed firmer in the saddle than before, and his loose notions of marriage and divorce began to be shadowed editorially.

THE [illegible]

This led to the starting of the Advance in Chicago to supersede the Independent in the Northwest, and Mr. Bowen was made to feel that Tilton's management was seriously injuring the business, and Mr. Tilton may have felt that his position was being undermined by opponents of his views, with whom he subsequently pretended to believe I was in league. Vague intimations of his feeling hard toward me I ascribed to this misconception. I had in reality taken no step to harm him.

A YOUNG GIRL IN THE CASE

After Mrs. Tilton's return from the West in December 1870, a young girl whom Mrs. Tilton had taken into the family, educated and treated like her own child—her testimony I understand is before the Committee—was sent to me with an urgent request that I would visit Mrs. Tilton at her mother's. She said that Mrs. Tilton had left her home and gone to her mother's in consequence of ill treatment of her husband. She then gave an account of what she had seen of cruelty and abuse on the part of the husband that shocked me, and yet more when with downcast look she said that Mr. Tilton had visited her chamber in the night and sought her consent to his wishes.

A HOME WHICH SEEMED LIKE A [illegible] DREAM

I immediately visited Mrs. Tilton at her mother's, and received an account of her home life and of the despotism of her husband, and of the management of a woman whom he had made housekeeper, which seemed like a [illegible] dream. The question was whether she should go back or separate forever from her husband. I asked permission to bring my wife to see them, whose judgment in all domestic relations I thought better than my own, and accordingly a second visit was made.

MRS. BEECHER'S INDIGNATION

The result of the interview was that my wife was extremely indignant towards Mr. Tilton, and declared that no [illegible] on earth would induce her to remain an hour with a man who had treated her with [illegible] insult and cruelty. I felt as strongly as she did, but [illegible] as I always do at giving advice in favor of separation. It was agreed that my wife should give her final advice [illegible]. The next day, when ready to go, the [illegible] word, but there was [illegible] the children were present, and so I wrote on a scrap of paper: "I incline to think that your view is right, and that a separation and settlement of support will be wisest, and that in his present [illegible] state her presence with him is far more likely to [illegible] than of absence."

Mrs. Tilton did not at all tell me that my presence had anything to do with this trouble, nor did she let me know that on the July previous he had extorted from her a confession of excessive affection for me.

On the evening of December 27, 1870, Mr. Bowen, on his way home, called at my house and handed me a letter from Mr. Tilton. It was as nearly as I can remember in the following terms:

TILTON'S DEMAND FOR BEECHER TO QUIT

For reasons which you explicitly know and which I forbear to state, I demand that you withdraw from the pulpit and quit Brooklyn as a residence.

THEODORE TILTON.

BOWEN COMES IN

I read it over twice and turned to Bowen and said, "This man is crazy. This is sheer insanity," and other like words. Mr. Bowen professed to be ignorant of the contents, and I handed him the letter to read. We at once fell into a conversation about Mr. Tilton. He gave me some account of the reasons why he had reduced him from the editorship of the Independent to the subordinate position of contributor—viz., that Mr. Tilton's religious and social views were ruining the paper. But he said that as soon as it was known that he had so far broken with Tilton there came pouring in upon him so many stories of Mr. Tilton's private life and habits that he was overwhelmed, and that he was now considering whether he could consistently retain him on the Brooklyn Union or as chief contributor to the Independent. He narrated the story of the affair at Winsted, Conn., some like stories from the Northwest, and charges brought against Tilton in his own office. Without doubt he believed these allegations, and so did I. The other facts previously stated to me seemed a full corroboration. We conversed for some time, Mr. Bowen wishing my opinion. It was frankly given. I did not see how he could maintain [illegible] with Mr. Tilton. The substance of the full conversation was that Tilton's inordinate vanity, his fatal facility in blundering (for which he had a genius), and ostentatious independence in his own opinions, and general impracticableness, would keep the Union at disagreement with the political party for whose service it was published, and now, added to all this, these revelations of these profligate immoralities would make his connection with either paper fatal to its interests. I spoke strongly and emphatically under the great provocation of his threatening to me and the revelation I had just had concerning his domestic affairs.

Mr. Bowen derided the letter of Tilton's which he had brought to me, and said earnestly that if trouble came of it I might rely upon his friendship. I learned afterwards that in the further quarrel ending in Tilton's peremptory expulsion from Bowen's service this conversation was repeated to Mr. Tilton. I believe that Bowen had an interview and received some further information about Tilton from my wife, to whom I had referred him.

MR. TILTON'S FINAL OVERTHROW

Although I have no doubt that Mr. Tilton would have lost his place at any rate, I have also no doubt that my influence was decisive and precipitated his final overthrow. When I came to think it all over I felt very unhappy at the contemplation of Mr. Tilton's impending disaster. I had loved him much, and at one time he had seemed like a son to me. My influence had come just at the time of his first unfolding, and had much to do with his early development. I had aided him externally to bring him before the public. We had been together in the great controversies of the day until after the war, and our social relations had been intimate.

It is true that his nature always exaggerated his own excellencies. When he was but a boy he looked up to me with affectionate admiration. After some years he felt himself my equal, and was very companionable, and when he had outgrown me and reached the position of the first man of the age he still was kind and patronizing. I had always smiled at these weaknesses of vanity, and believed that with a larger experience, with some knocks among strong men and by sorrows that temper the soul, he would yet fulfil a useful and brilliant career. But now all looked dark. He was to be cast forth from his eminent position, and his affairs at home did not promise that sympathy and strength which makes one's house, as mine has been in times of adversity, a refuge from the storm and a tower of defense.

TILTON'S FIGHT TO REGAIN HIS PLACE IN SOCIETY

Besides a generous suffering I should have had a selfish reason for such if I dreamed that I was about to become the instrument by which Mr. Tilton meant to fight his way back to the prosperity which he had forfeited. It now appears that on the 29th of December, 1870, Mr. Tilton, having learned that I had replied to his threatening letter by expressing such an opinion of him as to set Mr. Bowen finally against him and bring him face to face with immediate ruin, extorted from his wife, then suffering under a severe illness, a document incriminating me, and prepared an elaborate attack on me. On Tuesday evening, Dec. 30, 1870, about 7 o'clock, Mr. Francis D. Moulton called at my house and with intense earnestness said, "I wish you to go with me to see Mr. Tilton." I replied that I could not then, as I was just going to my prayer meeting. With the most positive manner he said, "You must go; somebody else will take care of the meeting." I went with him, not knowing what trouble had agitated him, but vaguely thinking that I might now learn the solution of the recent threatening letter.

On the way I asked what the reason of this visit, to which he replied that Mr. Tilton would inform me, or words to that effect. On entering his house Mr. Moulton locked the door, saying something about not being interrupted. He requested me to go into the front chamber on the parlor floor. I was under the impression that Mr. Tilton was going to pour out upon me his anger for colleaguing with Bowen and for the advice of separation given to his wife. I wished Mr. Moulton to be with me as a witness, but he insisted that I should go by myself.

HOW HE WAS RECEIVED BY TILTON

Mr. Tilton received me coldly but calmly. After a word or two, standing in front of me with a memorandum in his hand, he began a set oration. He charged me in substance with acting for a long time in an unfriendly spirit, that I had sought his downfall, had spread injurious rumors about him, was using my place and influence to undermine him, had advised Mr. Bowen to dismiss him, and much more that I cannot remember. He then declared that I had injured him in his family relations, had joined with his mother in law in producing discord in his house, had advised a separation, had alienated his wife's affection from him, had led her to love me more than any other living being, had corrupted her moral nature and taught her to be insincere, lying and hypocritical, and ended by charging that I had made wicked proposals to her. Until he reached this I had listened with some contempt, under the impression that he was attempting to bully me. But with the last charge he produced a paper purporting to be a certified statement of a previous confession made to him by his wife of her love for me, and that I had made proposals to her of an impure nature.

MRS. TILTON'S CONFESSION

He said that this confession had been made to him in July, six months previous; that his sense of honor and affection would not permit any such document to remain in existence; that he had burned the original, and should now destroy the only copy; and he then tore the paper into small pieces. If I had been shocked at such a statement, I was absolutely thunderstruck when he closed the interview by requesting me to repair to his house, where he said Elizabeth was waiting for me, and learn from her lips the truth of his stories in so far as this concerned her.

This fell like a thunderbolt on me. Could it be possible that his wife, whom I had regarded as the type of moral goodness, should have made such false and atrocious statements? And yet if she had not, how would he dare to send me to her for confirmation of his charges?

LIKE A SLEEP-WALKER IN THE [illegible]

I went forth like a sleep walker, while clouds were flying in the sky. There had been a snow storm which was breaking away. The winds were out and whistling through the leafless trees, but all this was peace compared to my mood within. I believe that Moulton went with me to the door of Tilton's house. The housekeeper, the same woman of whom Mr. Tilton had complained, seemed to have been instructed by him, and she evidently expected me, and showed me up at once to Mrs. Tilton's room.

LIKE A MARBLE MONUMENT

Mrs. Tilton lay upon her bed, white as marble, with closed eyes as in a trance, and with her hands upon her bosom, palm to palm, like one in prayer. As I look back upon it, the picture is like some forms carved in marble that I had seen upon monuments in Europe.

BEECHER'S VISIT TO MRS. TILTON

She made no motion and gave no sign of recognition of my presence. I sat down near her and said, "Elizabeth, Theodore has been making very serious charges against me, and sends me to you for confirmation." She made no reply or sign. Yet it was plain that she was conscious and listening. I repeated some of his statements: that I had brought discord to the family, had alienated her from him, had sought to break up the family, had usurped his influence, and then, as well as I could, I added that he had said that I had made improper suggestions to her, and that she admitted this fact to him last July. I said, "Elizabeth, have you made such statements to him?" She made no answer. I repeated the question. Tears ran down her cheeks, and she very slightly bowed her head in acquiescence. I said, "You cannot mean that you have stated all that he has charged." She opened her eyes and began in a slow and feeble way to explain how sick she had been, how wearied out with importunity, that he had confessed his own [illegible], and said that he could not bear to think that she was [illegible] than he, that she might win him to reformation if she would confess that she had loved me more than him, and that they would repent and go on with future concord. I cannot give her language, but only the tenor of her representations. I received them impatiently. I spoke to her in the strongest language. Of course I said to her, "Have I ever made any improper advances to you?" She said, "No." Then I asked, "Why did you say so to your husband?" She seemed deeply distressed. "My friend" (by that designation she almost always called me), "I am sorry, but I could not help it. What can I do?" I told her she could state in writing what she had now told me. She beckoned for her writing materials, which I handed her from her secretary standing nearby, and she sat up in bed and wrote a brief counter statement.

DID [illegible] SOLICITATIONS.

In a sort of postscript she denied explicitly that I had ever offered any improper solicitations to her, that being the only charge made against me by Mr. Tilton or sustained by the statement about the confession which he had read to me. I dreamed of no worse charge at that time. That was horrible enough. The mere thought that he could make it, and could have extorted any evidence on which to base it, was enough to take away my senses. Neither my consciousness of its utter falsehood nor Mrs. Tilton's retraction of her part in it could remove the shock from my heart and head. Indeed her admission to me that she had stated under any circumstances to her husband so wicked a falsehood was the crowning blow of all. It seemed to me as if she was going to die, that her mind was overthrown, and that I was in some dreadful way mixed up in it, and might be left at her death with this terrible accusation hanging over me.

I returned like one in a dream to Mr. Moulton's house, where I said very little, and soon went home. It has been said that I confessed guilt and expressed remorse. This is utterly false. Is it likely that, with Mrs. Tilton's retraction in my pocket, I should have thus stultified myself?

MRS. TILTON'S WRITTEN DENIAL.

On the next day at evening Mr. Moulton called at my house and came up into my bedroom. He said that Mrs. Tilton, on her husband's return to her after our interview, had informed him what she had done, and that I had her retraction. Moulton expostulated with me, said that the retraction under the circumstances would not mend matters, but only awaken fresh discord between husband and wife, and do great injury to Mrs. Tilton without helping me. Mrs. Tilton, he said, had already recanted in writing the retraction made to me, and of course there might be no end to such contradictions. Meanwhile Tilton destroyed his wife's first letter acknowledging the confession, and Mr. Moulton claimed I had taken a mean advantage and made dishonorable use of Theodore's request that I should visit her in obtaining from her a written contradiction to a document not in existence. He said that all difficulties could be settled without any such papers, and I ought to give it up. He was under great excitement. He made no verbal threats, but he opened his overcoat, and with some emphatic remark he showed a pistol, which afterward he took out and laid on the bureau near which he stood. I gave the paper to him, and after a few moments' talk he left.

MOULTON'S THIRD VISIT

Within a day or two after this Mr. Moulton made me the third visit, and this time we repaired to my study in the third story of my house. Before speaking of this interview it is right that I should allude to the suffering through which I had gone during the previous days, the cause of which was the strange change in Mrs. Tilton. Nothing had seemed to me more certain during all my acquaintance with her than that she was singularly simple, truthful and honorable. Deceit seemed absolutely foreign to her nature, and yet she had stated to her husband those strange and awful falsehoods. She had not, when daily I called and prayed with her, given me the slightest hint, I will not say of such accusations, but even that there was any serious family difficulty. She had suddenly in December called me and my wife to a consultation to a possible separation from her husband, still leaving me ignorant that she had put into his hands such a weapon against me. I was bewildered with a double consciousness of a saintly woman communicating a very needless treachery to her friend and pastor. My distress was boundless. I did not for a moment feel, however, that she was blameworthy, as would ordinarily be thought, but supposed that she had been overborne by sickness and shattered in mind until she scarcely knew what she did, and was no longer responsible for her acts. My soul went out to her in pity. I blamed myself for want of prudence and foresight, for I thought all this had been the result of her undue affection for me. I had a profound feeling that I would bear any blame and take any punishment if that poor child could only emerge from this cloud and be put back into the happiness from which I had been, as I thought, if not the cause, yet the occasion of withdrawing her.

HIS GREAT GRIEF

If my own daughter had been in a similar case my grief at her calamity could scarcely have been greater. Moreover, from the anger and fury of Mr. Tilton I apprehended that this charge, made by him and supported by the accusation of his wife, was to be at once publicly pressed against me, and if it was I had nothing but my simple word of denial to interpose against it. In my then morbid condition of mind I thought that this charge, although entirely untrue, might result in great disaster, if not in absolute ruin. The great interests which were entirely dependent on me, the church which I had built up, the book which I was writing, my own immediate family, my brother's name, now engaged in the ministry, my sisters, the name which I had hoped might live after me and be in some slight degree a source of strength and encouragement to those who should succeed me, and above all the cause for which I had devoted my life, seemed imperiled. It seemed to me that my life work was to end abruptly and in disaster. My earnest desire to avoid a public accusation and the evils which must necessarily flow from it, and which now have resulted from it, has been one of the leading motives that must explain my action during those four years with reference to this matter.

THE FAMOUS OUTBURST OF GRIEF

It was in such a sore and distressing condition that Mr. Moulton found me. His manner was kind and conciliatory. He seemed, however, to be convinced that I had been seeking Tilton's downfall, that I had leagued with Mr. Bowen against him, and that I had by my advice come near destroying his family. I did not need any argument or persuasion to induce me to do and say anything which would remedy the injury of which I then believed I had certainly been the occasion, if not the active cause. But Mr. Moulton urged that having wronged so—the wrong meant his means of support suddenly taken away, his reputation gone, his family destroyed, and that I had done it. He assured me of his own knowledge that the stories which I had heard of Mr. Tilton's impurity of life, and which I had believed and repeated to Mr. Bowen, were all false, and that Mr. Tilton had always been faithful to his wife. I was persuaded into the belief of what he said, and felt convicted of slander in its meanest form. He drew the picture of Mr. Tilton wronged in reputation, in position, wronged in purse, shattered in his family, where he would otherwise have found a refuge, and at the same time looking upon me out of his deep distress, while I, abounding in friends, most popular and with ample means—he drew that picture—my prosperity overflowing, and abounding in Tilton's utter degradation. I was most intensely excited indeed. I felt that my mind was in danger of giving way. I walked up and down the room pouring forth my heart in the most unrestrained grief and bitterness of self accusation, telling what my ideas were of the obligations of friendship, and of the sacredness of the household, denying, however, an intentional wrong, seeing that if I had been the cause, however remotely, of that which I then beheld, I never could forgive myself. Heaping all the blame on my own head, the case as it then appeared to my eyes was strongly against me. My old and fellow worker had been dispossessed of his eminent place and influence, and I had counselled it. His family had well nigh been broken up, and I had advised it; his wife had been long sick and broken in health and body, and I, as I fully believed it, had been the cause of all this wreck by continuing that blind heedlessness and friendship which had beguiled her heart and had aroused her husband into a fury of jealousy, although not caused by any intentional act of mine. And should I coldly defend myself? Should I pour indignation upon the lady? Should I hold her up to contempt as having thrust her affections upon me unsought? Should I cry out upon the man and his household in their great adversity? I gave vent to my feelings with utter [illegible]. I disclaimed with the greatest earnestness an intent to harm Theodore in his honor or his business, and with inexplicable sorrow I both blamed and defended Mrs. Tilton in one breath.

THE LETTER OF CONTRITION

Mr. Moulton was apparently affected by my [illegible], for it was [illegible] rather than a conversation. He said that if Mr. Tilton could really be persuaded of the friendliness of my feelings toward him, he was sure that there would be no trouble in procuring a reconciliation. I gave him leave to state to Theodore my feelings. He proposed that I should write a letter. I declined, but said that he could report our interview. He then prepared to make a memorandum of the talk, and sat down at my table and took down, as I supposed, a condensed report of my talk, for I went on still pouring out my wounded feelings over this great desolation in Mr. Tilton's family. It was not a dictation of sentence after sentence, he a mere amanuensis and I composing for him. Mr. Moulton was putting into his own shape parts of that which I was saying in my own manner, with profuse explanations. This paper of Mr. Moulton's was a mere memorandum of points to be used by him in setting forth my feelings. That it contains matters and points derived from me is without doubt, but they were put into sentences by him and expressed as he understood them, not as my words, but as hints of my figures and letters, to be used by him in conveying [illegible] with Mr. Tilton. He did not read the paper to me, nor did I read it, nor have I ever seen it or heard it read that I remember until the publication of Mr. Tilton's recent documents, and now, reading it, I see in it thoughts that point to the matter of my discourse, but it is not my paper, nor are those my sentences, nor is it a correct report of what I said. It is a mere string of hints hastily made by an unpracticed writer as helps to his memory in representing to Mr. Tilton how I felt towards his family. If more than this be claimed, if it be set forth as in any proper sense my letter, I then disown it and denounce it. Some of its sentences, and particularly that in which I am made to say that I had obtained Mrs. Tilton's forgiveness, I never could have said even in substance. I had not obtained nor asked any forgiveness from her, and nobody pretended that I had done so. Neither could I ever have said that I humbled myself before Tilton as before God, except in the sense that both to God and to the man I thought I had deeply injured I humbled myself, as I certainly did. But it is useless to analyze a paper prepared as this was. The remainder of my plain statement concerning it will be its best comment. This document was written upon three separate half sheets of large letter paper. After all was finished Mr. Moulton asked me if I would sign it. I said no, it was not my letter. He replied that it would have more weight if I would in some way indicate that he was authorized to explain my sentiments. I took my pen, and at some distance below the writing and upon the lower margin I indicated that I had committed the document in trust to Mr. Moulton, and I signed the lines thus written by me. A few words more as to its further fate. Moulton, of his own accord, said that after using it he would, in two or three days, bring the memorandum back to me, and he cautioned me about disclosing in any way that there was a difficulty between Mr. Tilton and me, as it would be injurious to Tilton to have it known that I had quarreled with him, as well as to have rumors set afloat. I did not trouble myself about it until more than a year afterward, when Tilton began to write up his case (of which hereafter), and was looking up documents. I wondered what was in this old memorandum, and desired to see it for [illegible] certainty, so one day I suddenly asked Moulton for that memorandum, and said, "You promised to return it to me." He seemed confused for a moment, and [illegible] "Did I?" "Certainly," I answered. He replied that the paper had been destroyed. On my putting the question again, he said, "That paper was burned up long ago," and during the next two years in various conversations, of his own accord, he spoke of it as destroyed. I have never asked for nor authorized the destruction of this paper. But I was not allowed to know that the document was in existence until a distinguished editor in New York, within a few weeks past, assured me that Mr. Moulton had shown him the original, and that he had examined my signature to be sure of its genuineness. I know there was a copy of it since this statement was in preparation.

A REVELATION FULL OF ANGUISH.

While I rejected this memorandum as my work, or an accurate condensation of my statement, it does undoubtedly correctly represent that I was in profound sorrow, and that I blamed myself with great severity for the disaster of the Tilton family. I had not then the light that I now have. There was much then that weighed heavily upon my heart and conscience which now weighs only on my heart. I had not the light which analyzes and discriminates things. By one blow there opened before me a revelation full of anguish—an agonized family whose interests had been my friends greatly beloved, the husband ruined in worldly prospects, the household crumbling to pieces, the woman by long sickness and suffering either corrupted to deceit, as her husband alleged, or so broken in mind as to be irresponsible, and either way it was her enthusiasm for me, or so I was made to believe. That was the germ and beginning of the trouble. It was for me to have forestalled and prevented that mischief. My age and experience in the world should have put me more on my guard. I could not at that time tell what was true and what was not true of all the considerations urged by Mr. Tilton and Mr. Moulton. There was a grief before me, in which lay those who had been warm friends, and they alleged that I had helped to plunge them therein. That seemed enough to fill my soul with sorrow and anguish. No mother who has lost a child but will understand the wild self accusation that grief produced against all reason, blaming herself for what things she did do and for what she neglected to do, and charging upon herself, her neglect or heedlessness, the death of the child, while ordinarily every one knows that she had worn herself out with her assiduities. Soon after this I met Mr. Tilton at Moulton's house. Either Moulton was sick or was very late in rising, for he was in bed. The subject of my feelings and conduct toward Tilton was introduced. I made a statement of the motives under which I had [illegible] in counselling Bowen, of my feelings in regard to Mr. Tilton's family, disclaiming with horror the thought of wrong, and expressing desire to do whatever lay in human power to remedy any evil I had occasioned, and to reunite his family. Tilton was silent and sullen.

TILTON AS AN INJURED MAN.

He played the part of an injured man, but Moulton said to Mr. Tilton with intense emphasis, "That is all that a gentleman can say, and you ought to accept it as an honorable basis of reconciliation." This he repeated two or three times, and Tilton's countenance cheered up under Moulton's strong talk. We shook hands and parted in a friendly way. Not very long afterward Tilton asked me to his house, and said that he should be glad to have good old times renewed. I do not remember whether I ever took a meal after this under his roof, but I certainly was invited by him to renew my visits as formerly. I never resumed my intimacy with the family, but once or twice I went there soon after my reconciliation with Mr. Tilton, and at his request. I particularly remember a scene which took place at his house when he talked about his wife and me in a very gracious mood. He began by mourning his sorrows; he was very desolate, the future seemed quite dark. After impressing us with his great patience he grew generous, praised me to his wife, saying that I had taken upon myself all blame of past troubles, and had honorably exculpated her, telling me that his wife likewise had behaved very magnanimously, had blamed herself and declared that I was blameless, and he closed his homily with increasing hope and cheer, saying that, deep as was his misery, he did not know but that it would work out in the future a more cheerful home than he had before. I restrained my smiles at the absurdity of the thing, well content to have it evaporate so, and even thinking he was generous in his way. This seemed to me the end of trouble. With a sensitive and honorable man who had no ulterior designs to accomplish, it would have been the burial of the difficulty. I supposed Mr. Tilton had given up the idea of intentional wrong on my part and forgiven my unintentional wrong. I plainly understand now what I did not then suspect, that my trouble of mind was to be kept alive and nourished so that I must be used to act on my friend in securing from Mr. Bowen the money which Mr. Tilton claimed to be due, as compensation for his expulsion from the two newspapers.

BEECHER'S HIGH OPINION OF TILTON'S VIRTUE

Mr. Moulton and Mr. Tilton both strove to obliterate from my mind all belief in the rumors that had been circulated about Mr. Tilton. There was much going on in silencing, explaining, arranging, etc., that I did not understand as well then as now. But of one thing I was convinced—viz., that Mr. Tilton had the highest sense of marital purity, and that he had never strayed from the path of virtue, which preservation he owed, as he told me in a narrative of his life, to a very solemn scene with his father, who on the eve of his leaving home pointed out to him the nature of amorous temptations and snares, and the evils to be dreaded from unlawful practices. He declared that he had always been kept spotless by the memory of that scene. I was glad to believe it true, and felt how hard it was that he should be made to suffer by evil and slanderous foes. I could not explain some testimony which had been laid before me, but I said there is undoubtedly some misunderstanding, and if I knew the whole I should find Theodore, though with obvious faults, at heart sound and good. These views I often expressed to intimate friends, in spite of their manifest incredulity, and what in the light of the facts I must now call their well deserved ridicule.

WEDNESDAY MORNING SEPT 2 1874

THE UNION HERALD ON MOSES

A few days since, in the course of some remarks upon the situation of affairs in South Carolina we mentioned the fact that Governor Moses had confessed the charge of appropriating the contingent fund of the State to secure control of the columns of the Columbia Union-Herald and to secure the influence of that paper in favor of himself and that the only reason he assigned for doing so was that he had learned that the paper was about to commence the advocacy of a policy unfriendly to himself and, as he believed, inimical to the best interests of the State and as it was a very influential Republican paper he considered the securing of its influence on the side of ring rule and Moses as a legitimate use of the contingent fund. The amount he was to pay was $8 000, and his warrant was actually drawn upon the contingent fund for the money. But there was a misunderstanding in the premises. Mr Andrews, proprietor of the paper, who is a State Senator, did not, it appears, bargain for warrants on the contingent fund, but for current money. The warrant was not a legal tender under the circumstances and the Union Herald did not become the organ of Moses and the ring prophets. On the contrary, quite the reverse; it goes for the scalp of Governor Moses with all the vehemence of a $8000 disappointment. Added to his previous inclination to kick in the traces, the existence of which had influenced the Governor to his attempt at the reformation of the paper through conduct that may be characterized briefly by calling it theft and bribery combined. No wonder the youthful Governor thought it important to secure the friendship of the Union Herald or at least prevent its opening its battery upon him, taking the following from a recent number of that paper as a specimen of its manner of discussing the situation:

> When, in 1872, the previous record of Frank Moses was referred to as a reason why he should not be made Governor the party was assured that the Chief Justice had such great influence over his son that he might be safely depended upon to keep the young Governor in straight paths. We have been disposed to believe that the strength of this influence was exaggerated in view of the utter failure of the Governor's administration of affairs, his gross indecency of life, his thorough shamelessness in the rescue of thieves and scoundrels from the meshes of the law, his brazen use of the funds of the State for his private purposes, his utter disregard of his plighted word, his unblushing bargain and sale of offices and his total disregard of the interests of the party which has elevated him from the lowest depths of social and pecuniary ruin to its highest official honors; but when we see the Chief Justice laying aside the dignity of his position, running over the State to secure the renomination of his reprobate prodigal son, in consultation with the enemies of the Republican party as to the best way to kill off the effort to reform Moses out of power, inventing excuses here, bargaining and huckstering there, and boldly defending the offenses of this political debauchee, we have been forced to the conclusion that like father, like son is a proverb which finds its truth exemplified in South Carolina as in every part of the world.

A CORRECTION CORRECTED

The Vancouver Register having stated that the company from which Struve deserted was the same in which Dougherty served, proceeds to correct the error by saying that Struve was in company G while Dougherty was in company H. It is not a matter of much importance, but since the history of Mr Struve's connection with the army is being examined it is as well to be accurate in the matter. Struve and Dougherty (the man who made the affidavit) were not in the same regiment. Dougherty was in company H, 4th Infantry, and Struve was in troop F, 1st Dragoons. He enlisted in New York in the fall of 1850 and deserted at Benicia, California, in May, 1854. Dougherty served in the 4th Infantry 10 years, 5 in the ranks and 5 in the band. The Register is also incorrect in stating that at the time of Struve's desertion Dougherty was a prisoner at Alcatraz. Alcatraz was not used as a prison, if we recollect rightly, until long after that time. Dougherty was imprisoned at Alcatraz about two years ago and was discharged after only ten days by order of General Schofield. That was his first and last imprisonment there.

ANOTHER SLANDER ON BEECHER

Henry Ward Beecher finds time amid the perils and anxieties of his fight with the Tiltons and Moultons and other distressing facts, to refute a slander that has been widely circulated concerning his attitude toward Jefferson Davis in 1865. What purported to be a sermon of his having been extensively circulated, in which he is reported to have urged the hanging of Jefferson Davis, he has just written a letter to the Louisville Courier Journal denouncing the whole thing as a forgery. He says:

> I not only never uttered or wrote any such miserable stuff but the whole world knows that while others were clamoring for some sacrifice or victim I everywhere and always with intense earnestness opposed the shedding of one drop of blood and resisted with all my might the influences which sought the execution of Jeff Davis. It is not the first shameful forgery upon me, which has been circulated in the South and West. I am so heartily desirous of the re-establishment of good will between all who have been alienated and I do so much value the good will of my fellow citizens of the South that I step aside from my usual course and make a reply to this slander.

Mr Lamb, of the Western Union Telegraph Company, has lately visited Coos Bay to consult with the business men of that section concerning the construction of a telegraph line to Empire, from some point on the present California and Oregon line. We have no information as to whether his impressions of the country and the people were such as to induce him to report favorably. Such a line of telegraph would be of considerable advantage to the people of that region but it may be problematical whether it would pay. It is safe to assume that whenever the Company are [illegible] it will pay the line will be built.

This from the Coos Bay News has our hearty indorsement:

> The showmen from the East who come to California with such abnormal freaks of nature as the two-headed negro girl or the three legged man from Bengal find their avocation considerably broken into by the statute prohibiting the display of human deformity. The law is a very good one and should be made a statute of every State in the Union. Whether our Legislature will see fit to pass a similar law at its next session remains to be seen. Believing that nothing calculated to offend good taste or shock modesty should be placed on exhibition, we unhesitatingly endorse the arrests made in San Francisco for parading physical deformities before the public.

SUMMERING BY THE SEA

ASTORIA, CLATSOP, UNITY, SHOALWATER BAY AND ALL ALONG SHORE, Aug. 28 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I wonder if you know how nice it is to be sick and have to go to the sea side, or if you've ever been afflicted with that fearful epidemic that annually sweeps through our fair city of Portland at the beginning of the fashionable season, about the 1st of July—taking away in fact a large portion of the population. In these times pater familias might not think it exactly feasible to send his family to an expensive watering place, while he remained to take up with bachelor or restaurant fare himself; but the physician says, "Yes, Madam, certainly you are ill, or at least you are threatened with illness, having severe symptoms of petrifaction in the cardiac region besides having in your system a great deal of—hem—well—of—malaria, which makes a change of air quite necessary." And lives there a man with soul so dead that he can see the wife of his bosom and his innocent babes perish before his eyes for the want of a sniff of sea air? Not so, and a general flitting takes place, every one that can fleeing from that hydra-headed monster that is supposed to be lurking in every nook and corner of the city ready to spring with deadly cut and poisoned fangs upon the luckless passer by—that dreadful malaria, or as our new statesman LaDow terms it, "malerry," which disappears at the first breath of old Neptune as, of old, Satan was known to flee at the first word spoken from Holy Writ. Owing to some reason, perhaps the stringency of the money market, fewer people have been staying at the watering places this summer than usual; yet the fares on the river boats have been so low that there has been quite a rush of travel, some coming away for a few days only, others for a month or more, and some families and parties bringing their tents and leading a delightful gypsy life encamped in the open air.

Astoria is really looking up considerably in regard to business within the last year or two, a good deal having been done in the way of building houses, making streets, sidewalks, &c, while the farmers' wharf and warehouse look like business. Foreign ships are already coming in for wheat, a number having but just arrived and now discharging their ballast. Indeed quite a forest of masts are at the city front, giving it a lively business look.

A few invalids and pleasure seekers are here for the heated term, the air being excellent, and the place as healthful, probably, as there is in the world, and this being well known it would be one of the most popular and frequented resorts—many people, especially invalids, not caring to go further—if there were only a stopping place where one could always find ample, clean and commodious rooms with a good table and good attendance. It seems indeed that those who minister here to the wants of the traveling public stand very much in their own light that they do not better fit themselves to meet its demands. There is no house that has anywhere near sufficient accommodations during the season. The hotels are brim full, and at Mrs Rodgers' boarding house—by far the best place in town in regard to the excellence of the fare spread before the guests—from ten to fifteen have been turned away every day for want of room.

Astoria may thank the opposition line of boats, and consequent reduction of prices, for the rush of people that has given the place such a crowded and busy aspect for the last few weeks; for wherever and whenever one goes in this direction he must come to Astoria first in order to get elsewhere.

There is constant travel to Clatsop Beach, all the houses there being tolerably full and accommodations much better than in former years, the Dexter House being rather the favorite in spite of the difference in price.

You can go to Skipanon twice a day, the stage for Clatsop Beach meeting you there, on the little steamer Katata, which was named after an old Indian Chief who was once a dignitary in this his land, thinking to please him; but his blue blood revolted at the idea of lending his noble name to the little tub and he was alarmingly indignant thereat.

Unity, situated at the head of Baker's Bay, and two or three miles beyond Cape Disappointment, is a most desirable stopping place, and if Mr Hunter, the present proprietor of the Bay View House, makes the improvements anticipated during the coming year it is sure to become one of our most attractive summer resorts. At present the house is exceedingly well kept, Mr Hunter's obliging nature and Mrs H's superior housewifery qualities making it so home like that it is little wonder people are inclined to linger there, especially to partake of the clams, oysters and fish just taken from their native element and cooked to perfection.

There is a pretty strip of beach directly in front of the house, stretching for some distance around the bay, to a picturesque point of rocks which can be passed at low tide only, and where the breeze meets you coming in from over the bar quite as strongly as the most anxious seeker for sea breezes could desire. A walk of about a mile in another direction, over a most romantic woodland road, brings you to the open sea, where there is a broad and beautiful beach of twenty miles in extent with occasional rocky points and promontories covered with verdure.

The road to Shoalwater Bay (to which place a hack runs daily from the Bay View House) lies along the beach and is one of the loveliest drives in the universe. A road is also being built from the same point to Cape Disappointment, running along the shaded wooded shore of the bay, and which is expected to be finished before another season, making a charming walk or drive to that interesting place, the Cape and Lighthouse, which, through Mr Munson's well known politeness, has become one of the most desirable places to visit that one finds in all their summer wanderings. A wharf is also about to be constructed at Unity which will facilitate landing and enable people to bring their own horses and carriages, which has been complained of as a great want heretofore. The Varuna runs here from Astoria twice a week, but the landing is rather difficult at present.

Mr Barnes and family pitched their tents within a few yards of the hotel in a beautiful locality that overlooked the bay, where they spent their time most happily until a rain storm came. The first two days they bore it very well, but when it seemed apparent that like a serial story it was "to be continued," they became disgusted with the prospect and returned to Portland. A large party, however, of ladies and gentlemen who had just arrived on the Varuna took possession of the camp as they left it and are enjoying the situation to the utmost—Mr and Mrs Arnold, Mr and Mrs Lee, Mr Northrup, Mr Morgan and others. A good many go on to Shoalwater Bay—three or four hours' drive—but although there are fair accommodations there it is considered rather a lonely place and they mostly return to Unity, a goodly number only remaining at Shoalwater one night.

Mr LaDow is here with his family and interests us all with his brilliant conversation and his exploits as a fisherman!

We have our adventures here too, by flood and field. Mr C—— of Vancouver was going across the bay in a row boat to look at a ranch which was advertised for sale there, and invited a small party of us to accompany him, which, as the morning was a fine one, we were glad to do, Mr C telling us before we started that he knew but little about boating; but as it requires no great amount of skill to row a boat we cared little for that. We had a pleasant ride across the bay and up the Wallacot river, where we landed and strolled across the meadows for an hour or so while Mr C went to look at the ranch in question. When we started back we had just got into the bay a little distance when, as the tide was coming in, our boatman thought he could take a short cut across one of the sand bars that we had gone along [illegible] in coming [illegible] over [illegible] trying it we found ourselves fast on the sand and [illegible] to push it off [illegible] which was thrown overboard and lost! And there we sat, after the first realizing sense of the situation, looking at each other with a despairing inquiry that implied the question, "What shall we do now?" The tide was coming in rapidly, the water beating furiously up on the sand bar and our boat, and the spray dashing over us at every moment. We [illegible] helpless [illegible] the waters of the bay, which [illegible] seven miles lay between us and port. In the boat was not a spare oar nor a paddle, pole or even a strip of board to help ourselves with. Our boatman was in despair and could only suggest that if we started before the tide came in too deep it was possible we could all wade to the shore and walk around to the Bay House. But the distance was great, we would have to [illegible] a tall promontory that projected into the bay, we should be very wet, and one of the party was an invalid. Meanwhile the tide was not [illegible] to our deliberations but increased each moment, and every wave as it came rolling in with its white crest dashed itself madly against the obstruction our boat offered to its progress, till it was too late to reach the shore even if we wished, and as the wind had arisen we were getting drenched with every wave. But the water had also risen till we were able to push off at last, and there we were, not exactly in mid ocean but in mid-bay—some helpless women, an inexperienced boatman and but one available oar. Finally one of the ladies had an idea—she remembered that somewhere at some time she had seen a boat rowed with one oar and steered with the other. So keeping as near shore as possible Mr C bent himself to the task, the rest of us undertaking to keep the boat in shape with the spare oar, and after some hours of toil and weariness we landed near the hotel, wet, hungry, exhausted and with a great disinclination to embark upon the briny deep again in a hurry.

Mr Semple and family were encamped upon the beach for some time and were situated nicely with good tents and all the accessories of camp life. A party from up the Columbia, thirteen in number, had also encamped near them, so that it looked quite like a rural (very rural) village, with its troop of barefooted children running about almost wild with happiness in their freedom from restraint; the men and women bathing in their picturesque costumes, or sitting on the rocks fishing, or getting an involuntary bath as an occasional big wave caught them while digging clams. At several times the beach was covered with vast numbers of fish—porgies, pike and candle fish—that had been cast up by the sea and could not return.

But the rains descended and the floods came—so rare a thing in August—and the campers who had found life on the beach to be delightfully romantic while the sun shone found it to be quite the reverse when the ground was wet, the tents dripping and a general sloppiness about everything. So the party from up the river took their departure, excepting two of the ladies, who remained near Mr Semple's, waiting for their husbands, who were to join them there. The weather continued damp and cool, not to say cold, and Mr Semple concluded to leave also. So he started with his family, accompanied also by the two ladies, who could not remain there alone, their husbands having not yet arrived. They were all in a wagon and just ascending the first hill from the beach—the road being very muddy and slippery from the recent rains—when the horses, in trying to draw the load up the hill, slipped repeatedly, and finding they could not get a firm foot hold refused to try longer, but commenced going backward directly over the precipice. It looked as if nothing could save them all from utter destruction, and one of the ladies (Mrs Buchanon) becoming terrified jumped from the wagon. The horses, which could not be controlled, continued to go backward till the hind wheels of the wagon were stopped by a log that lay just below the edge of the bank and had been entirely concealed by the bushes. With hearts full of thankfulness for escape from such imminent peril they picked up the injured lady and came on to the Bay View, where she was laid on a lounge and cared for as well as circumstances would permit—the right knee being badly injured, the left ankle sprained (we thought not dislocated) and the foot bruised considerably. She was placed in a chair and carried on board the Varuna and started for home the same day, her sister accompanying her.

A great many people have been here for a longer or shorter time; a great many have gone, a number are here still, and every day more or less still coming. Mrs Higgins, Mrs McKay and family, Mr and Mrs Waite from Milwaukie, Mr Murray, Mrs White and family, Miss Fanny Holman, Mr Gross and family, Mr Lowe and family, Mrs Warner, Mrs Clark, and quite a large number from Oregon City.

Happy days are these, but all too short for the sum of enjoyment crowded into their brief hours. A party of us take our lunch and walk over to the sea beach in the morning and spend the day upon the sands, bathing, fishing, strolling down near the Cape, climbing the rocks hunting for shells and sea moss, and watching the far off sails just gliding into sight and making their way to the bar. Like birds that seek a change of climate with the different seasons, we weary of one place and go to another, drifting about with a kind of don't-care-iveness in this idle midsummer time. Ah well! let us enjoy it while we may, for soon, very soon, these lovely haunts by forest and river, by field and shore will know us no more—perhaps forever. The tide of travel will have turned, and like summer birds whose revel is over we shall hasten again to our homes, if not wiser and better, at least browner and heartier for our summer wanderings.

CITY.

A NIMROD SCENE.—A joke partaking of a large share of the practical was played a few evenings since on a well known insurance agent of this city and an ex Mayor in the bargain. Mr B, for by such name shall the agent in question be known, went up to the Cascades for a hunt, accompanied by a gentleman prominently connected with a certain steamboat company. When it was known that the mighty nimrods were to return to the city, a well known livery stable man concluded that it would be a capital opportunity to pay off old scores against the ex Mayor, and play a practical joke at the same time. So a diminutive mule was [illegible] and rigged out in a most ludicrous manner with a pack-saddle and several strings of sleigh bells. Over all these trappings was placed a sort of net-work, while from the neck of the animal depended a huge cow bell. An invitation was extended to a large number of the ex Mayor's friends to be present at the wharf on the arrival of the Dalles boat, as fun was expected. Soon the joke leaked out and a great number of persons anxiously awaited the shrill whistle of the Oneonta, determined to be on hand and witness the sport. Long before the steamer made her appearance the dock was thronged with the crowd. Amid a great deal of fun and suppressed laughter the mule was rode down to the landing by a colored boy employed for the purpose. On one side of the donkey's neck was attached a large piece of pasteboard on which was painted the following words: "This animal was engaged expressly to convey home the game taken by the Hon H B." Every thing was in readiness, so that when Mr B stepped on the wharf with his friend, he found the pack train waiting to carry away in triumph the fruits of the chase. Such a [illegible] shout and hurrahing as went up from a score of throats was fearful to the nerves of the ex Mayor. He turned mighty red in the face, and perhaps felt a little indignant at the very undignified proceedings. But it wasn't any use to get mad, although the joke was all on one side. So the ex Mayor joined heartily in the laugh and declared that he was fairly and squarely sold for once. But the richest part of the joke was that neither of the [illegible] nimrods had captured anything, not even a skunk, crow or owl. Our ex Mayor friend had to stand the smiles for the crowd, but he declares that he had the [illegible] of selling this livery stable man [illegible] has been declared between these practical jokers.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.—Early [illegible] morning an old man [illegible] Rufus Johnson living at White Salmon, up the Columbia, [illegible] out to haul [illegible]. At noon he did not return for his dinner, when several members of the family with whom he was stopping, thinking that some accident might have befallen him, started out to find him. He was found [illegible] roadside in an unconscious [illegible] team he was driving [illegible] was found some distance [illegible] carefully brought to the house [illegible] finally revived and [illegible] however he was not able to tell [illegible] or where he was hurt. [illegible] there was every reason to [illegible] had become frightened and run away [illegible] Johnson was hurled violently to the ground and struck [illegible] internal injuries. A physician [illegible] summoned, but he could render no assistance whatever. Johnson lingered in great pain until last [illegible] when he expired. [illegible] had apparently been lying [illegible] road side the accident evidently happened [illegible] at an early hour of the day. No inquest was held over the body, none being deemed necessary. Johnson was [illegible] years. He had not [illegible] vicinity. He has a brother [illegible] and other relations residing at Corvallis, [illegible] no family. Deceased was an old [illegible] having emigrated to Oregon in 1847. The remains were buried on Mo[illegible]

AN UNKNOWN CORPSE.—Mention was [illegible] Sunday's issue that the dead body of a white man was found lying on the [illegible] White Salmon in Washington Territory, on Thursday of last week. Mr Collins, of Collins' landing, informs us that Sheriff McDo[illegible] started up on Monday morning, for the purpose of holding an inquest. It [illegible] that this body has been seen floating about the river for several days by numerous persons, none of whom took sufficient interest to remove it from the water and give it a decent Christian burial. Last Friday or Saturday the body floated into the mouth of White Salmon, where it was taken ashore and the Sheriff notified (there being no Coroner in the county). Foul play has been practiced, if the appearance of the corpse can be taken as evidence. One limb is severed entirely from the hand, and the throat is cut from ear to ear. Appearances would indicate that the man was foully murdered and the body thrown into the stream. Up to the present writing the body had not been identified. Light may be thrown on the mysterious affair at the inquest, and if the man has been murdered the perpetrators may yet be brought to condign punishment.

AN INTELLECTUAL TREAT.—We understand that the Rev A H Bradford, of Mt. Clair, New Jersey, who is now so acceptably supplying the pulpit of the Congregational Church, has consented to give two lectures here before his departure for the East, which will take place October 1st. We congratulate our citizens upon the opportunity thus to be presented of hearing upon popular subjects this talented and eloquent young divine. A rare treat may be expected. The lectures will be announced duly.

HELD TO ANSWER.—Gately, the man who was accused by a Mr Anderson of having assaulted him and forcibly taken from him $50 at his (Gately's) saloon along the Canyon road on Sunday, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday morning. After an examination of the case Gately was held to answer the charge of assault with intent to rob in the sum of $1,000.

SMALLPOX REPORTED.—A gentleman who arrived here from up the Columbia gives information of the reported existence of smallpox in the vicinity of White Salmon. It is said that a number of Indians living at that point have contracted the scourge and are down with it. It is not known where the Indians caught the contagion.

[illegible] AMATEUR.—We have received a copy of the first number of this paper, published by [illegible] Clay of this city. Though the little sheet is not perfection in typography it is a fair specimen for the first attempt of one who never had any experience in a printing office.

MUSICAL.—The services of Miss Lamberson, an accomplished musical teacher, have been secured as an assistant to Mrs F Dalton in the musical department of the Portland Academy.

POSTPONED.—The steamer California, which was announced to have sailed for Sitka and way ports, will not leave here until Thursday.

RECEPTION TO GENERAL DAVIS

A little over a year ago Gen Jeff C Davis was appointed to the command of the Dept of Columbia to succeed the late lamented Gen Canby At the time as all our readers are fully aware the Modocs were engaged in conflict with the United States troops in the Lava Beds and upon the arrival of General Davis a new campaign was commenced which speedily ended the war and made Captain Jack and his band captives A trial of the principal offenders was had, and in October last several of them including Captain Jack were put to death by hanging and the balance of the band were transferred to Wyoming Territory The war ended, Gen Davis came to this city though it was not the first time he having been stationed four years ago in Sitka, and on his return to the East he stopped in Portland temporarily however He took charge of his office at head quarters and made his home with us and being of a social temperament he became a member of the Progress Club and some months ago was elected to the Presidency of that organization By the appointment of Gen O O Howard to the command of this Department Gen Davis was relieved and having transferred his command to his successor and being on the point of departure to his new field in Wyoming, it was decided proper by the Progress Club to tender a reception to the retiring officer and accordingly last evening was set apart for the occasion Neat invitations were addressed to the most prominent gentlemen in the State to which many responded At 9 o'clock the doors of the club rooms were thrown open and by 10 o'clock the apartments were filled with the elite of the city and State among whom we observed Hon S F Chadwick Hon J W Nesmith Hon H W Corbett, Judge M P Deady Judge W W Upton Hon Henry Failing Judge W W Page General O O Howard the new and retiring officers of the Military Department many of whom were in full uniform officers of the vessels in port and many prominent gentlemen of this city and elsewhere The ladies were elegantly attired in fact we may say more so on this occasion than on any evening previous since the rooms of the Club were opened The hours of reception being limited from 9 to 11 P M dancing was improvised to entertain those who did not care to spend the time in conversation Music under the charge of our most efficient local talent was provided and it proved to be of the first order Tables in the dining room were laden with a substantial lunch by those well known caterers Alisky & Hegele and the guests took their repast at convenient intervals It was 12 o'clock ere the assembly retired The evening was spent pleasurably by all present and the retiring commander must have felt flattered by the reception tendered him

OREGON CITY ITEMS.

Thanks to our Oregon City correspondent for the following budget of news from the Falls City The letter bears date of September 1st

The County Board of Equalization is in session. They will have but little business this term

The schools of the city are again in session The public school employing four teachers is full Mr S D Pope is also teaching a private school with success

On the 29th, the interest of the estate of A F Waller in a 40 acre tract of land near Oswego was sold at public auction by the Administrator The price paid was $123 which is considered very fair as it is timbered land and not useful for the purposes of agriculture Mr John Ery was the purchaser

A hunting party consisting of Messrs Frazer White Richardson Burns and others, started to the Cascades on the 23d They returned on the 28th tired wet and hungry, without game and minus pleasure They report rain and nothing but rain from the time they reached the mountains until they returned

On Saturday Aug 21 our fire boys had an exciting time The occasion was the election of a Chief Engineer made necessary by the resignation of A C Bailey Two candidates were in nomination and friends of each interested themselves for their favorite and thus brought out a full vote Col W L White was the successful candidate His election gives general satisfaction He held the position before and acquitted himself with considerable credit

A meeting of citizens of this place was held last night to consider a communication from a hardware manufacturing company of Pittsburg, Pa asking what inducement, if any Oregon City would extend to such Company if they would establish an edge tool and nail factory at this place. Remarks were made by Mayor McCown Dr R [illegible] Messrs Schram J H Moore W W Buck Col White J L Barlow and others On motion, the Secretary W C Johnson and John Myers were authorized to correspond with Messrs Holladay and Goldsmith in regard to terms on which water power and ground can be obtained On motion the secretary was authorized to correspond with the agent of the Agricultural Implement Manufactory of Salem in regard to the terms on which they will agree to locate in Oregon City that Company having expressed a desire to come here if the proper inducements were offered

The Walla Walla Statesman of last Saturday says. The farmers are offering considerable wheat but the dealers evince but little desire to purchase. We hear of a sale of 10 000 bushels at 45 and 46 cents which we believe is the largest transaction this season At these figures, the purchaser furnishes the sacks

Captain George D Hill of Seattle has information from Washington that the immediate survey of the Skagit river has been ordered by the engineer bureau of the Government under an act passed at the last session appropriating $10 000 for the improvement of navigation of said river. The removal of two timber jams near the mouth of the river opens it to navigation for at least 70 miles from the Sound at all stages of water, through a valley of an average width of about 10 miles of as rich agricultural lands as any in the world

The Denver News says "A band of Sioux about 10 days ago committed an outrage near the [illegible] line of Colorado Territory that has rarely been equaled in barbarity. They caught four [illegible] that were going from town to town in search of work on the Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad and after butchering them, scalped and otherwise mutilated two and burned the hearts out of the others. They then burned the railway bridge near Aubrey station. The bodies of 7, a few days afterwards were brought into Dodge City supposed to have been murdered by the same band.

THE CENTENNIAL BUILDINGS —The articles of agreement for the Centennial Memorial Building have been signed by Mr R J Dobbins contractor and the officers representing the Centennial Board of Finance Mr Dobbins has given a bond in the sum of $180,000 for the faithful performance of the contract, the bond being secured by lien upon real estate in Philadelphia valued by the Chairman of the Building Committee at $250,000. Portions of the monthly payments due Mr Dobbins are also to be withheld until the completion of the work as further surety for the fulfillment of the contracts. If the building is not entirely completed on or before the 1st of February 1876, Mr Dobbins is to forfeit $1 200 as liquidating damages for each future day of delay, and on the other hand he is to be paid a reward of $1 200 per day for each day the building has been completed prior to Dec 1 1875. It is further provided that at any time the Centennial Board of Finance may after three days notice employ extra labor to prosecute the work if in the opinion of the Board the work is not being carried on with sufficient dispatch and the pay for such labor shall be taken from the sums due the contractor or the Board may take entire possession of the unfinished building and complete it at the expense of Mr Dobbins

REGISTERED PACKAGE ENVELOPES—Bids for one year's supply of registered package envelopes estimated at 1 000 000 were opened on the 28th ult. The new design is quite an improvement on the present envelope. The new seal is red edged to be easily distinguished and provided with an ingenious fastening by which the strap seals on the inside prevent the package being opened without leaving evidence of the act

"How Can I bring back the days of my power" was once asked by a fading belle. Around her once gathered the votaries of fashion. Her beauty had died out and she was neglected. A friend recommended the use of HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM She used it and almost as speedily as if Aladdin's touch had transformed her she regained her healthy complexion and was surrounded by admiring beaux. She had grown wiser and less coquettish and now lives happily the beloved center of a family group

Wheat in Liverpool by mail advices from San Francisco 10s 11 a 10s 10d for average California and 11s@12s for club

The local money market is showing rather more signs of activity as the current week progresses and with the full opening of the fall trade we expect the full advantages of the liberal supply of capital now estimated as in the country will be clearly manifest should the obstacles in the grain market now existing be broken the several markets would experience the benefits very quickly from the rapid circulation of a very considerable amount of capital which would be set afloat. At present discounts are dull at the usual rates.

Late advices say that the credit which Germany has placed in American securities is receiving another severe blow. Large investments were made by Germans in our National five twenties which returned a heavier rate of interest than is usually obtainable in that country and the regularity with which interest payments were made induced a corresponding faith in the soundness of other American securities. The Germans were especially flush for some time after the close of the war with France and Europe offered no such tempting investments as were to be found in our railroad bonds. Over two hundred millions of dollars were invested in American railroad bonds in Germany alone and the holders look in vain for the payment of interest long since due. One of the most distressing features of the case is that those bonds are nearly all held by middle and industrial classes and not by capitalists and bankers as has been generally believed. The Economist truly observes the present German experience resembles in many respects that of the English people after the panic of 1857. At that time large amounts of English capital were invested in American lands, railroad and other speculations of all kinds, with about as little business discrimination as was manifested by our German friends. The [illegible] of feeling excited by that event has more or less colored the English [illegible] of American credit to the present day. It is to be hoped that the revulsion may not be attended with similar [illegible] in Germany, but we learn with [illegible] that there is a very sore feeling in the latter country regarding the manner in which it is alleged that people were deceived and defrauded. It is presumable that the unfortunate holders will sell at ruinous sacrifice to the very capitalists and bankers from whom they originally purchased, and that they will band together and imitate the example of English holders, to press their interest in our law courts. It is certainly deplorable that American credit should have suffered such a [illegible] especially in Germany, whose people have always been ready and prompt to render us their [illegible], and evince their confidence in our honor

Wheat Shipping Again

Some fault has been found, as might have been expected, with our remarks on this subject last week. Shippers say our figures of the expenses were too low, and footed up far less than the actual cost of placing a cargo from this place to the English market. Others claim that the prices on wheat ought not here at our figures, are far higher than we made out. One, to whom a [illegible] "Looker On," [illegible] was given in our [illegible] yesterday, thinks our figures of £4 7s as freight hence to Liverpool, are too high by far and says

It is true that many of those vessels have been chartered to arrive an speculation as high a rate as that given the charterers anticipating a much higher rate by the time of the vessels' arrival. But that was done some time ago. To-day you will notice that spot charters are made in San Francisco at £3 10s and that freights are dull. How much more should vessels ask for freights in Portland when they have come here direct seeking? Certainly not more than £3 1s or five shillings per ton extra. Computing freights at £3 1s instead of £4 7s we will have a difference of eight cents per bushel to add to the value of wheat, making it 90 to 96 cents per bushel in Portland including sacks after giving the exporter his profit. A freight of £3 1s from Portland to Liverpool is a remunerative one and will not drive vessels away nor deter them from coming here

"Looker-on" we think argues with us in the main only he figures on what freights should be and our estimate was based on what they actually are. We do not think vessels coming here seeking should have much more than those going to San Francisco but as to whether it costs more to get a vessel to come here than to go there, is another matter. We know of but one ship arrived here seeking as yet and she has not though in port some two weeks had any offers yet. Hence quotations of freights, under the circumstances referred to must be entirely nominal. The £4 7s is the lowest figure we have heard at which it is probable charters could be effected for this port, and hence our estimate was based on that rate. Should freights come down as we believe they might, and still give ship-owners a living margin of course the decline would be so much more in favor of the producer or the exporter. We notice in the San Francisco Commercial Herald of last week that thirteen vessels had been chartered in that port during the seven days ending August 27th for the grain carrying trade to Europe. The quoted rates were for four vessels private for one £3 1s for one £3 18 for two £4 and the remaining were chartered at £4 5s 6d a £4 7s 6d according to port of destination

There appears to be indications pointing to more animation in grain circles than we have yet seen this season at no distant period. A few lots have come in from Washington county and some 28 car loads nearly 10 000 bushels were to arrive by the eastside freight train this evening. About 15 000 bushels have been sold at Walla Walla. The price talked of to-day is 90 cents per bushel delivered herein sacks or $1 50 per cental, at which we learn some has been sold. The bark Hermine has on board 150 tons but the other vessels ten or twelve in number have not yet begun to load. Exclusive of what has reached here to day there are probably not over 50 tons on store in this city. The price for storage here is 50 cents per ton the first month and 25 per ton for each month or fractional part of a [illegible] the first. There are very considerable lots stored at various points on the railroads on both sides of the river. Some of the vessels here we learn are receiving demurrage one at the rate of £25 and another £15 per day

Shipping Intelligence.

The Jane A Falkinburg is receiving a cargo of produce at Flanders wharf for Honolulu

The Mattie Macleay lies at Barnard & Griswold's wharf about ready to receive a cargo for the Sandwich Islands.

Dunnage is being placed in the ship St. Nicholas lying at the Gas Company's wharf

The time for the sailing of the California for Sitka has been postponed until Thursday next. She will carry a small freight of merchandise

The ship Middlesex is at Astoria where she will remain until further orders or till she receives a charter

The bark Hermine has about 150 tons of wheat on board

The bark Rival is undergoing repairs at Flanders wharf

The steamship John L Stephens from San Francisco arrived at 10½ o'clock this evening

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—A very insignificant amount compared with what is required to fill the vessels now ready to receive cargoes has come to hand and yet exporters do not seem to be pressing the market at all. Their ships are quietly awaiting a turn in affairs when the rush of harvest is over and more than three and a half million bushels of wheat will be held to load the vessels that favor our port with their presence. At this time quotations are almost nominal the latest telegrams from abroad having depressed an already dull market. The offers we learn are $1 40@1 45 ₽ cental

FLOUR—A few lots, the product of the new crop of wheat, have come to hand but not in sufficient quantities to make any impression on the market. The shipments during this month have been smaller than usual and still the stocks on hand here are not large though ample to supply the local demand. Choice extras command $5 50 ₽ barrel good country brands $5 and superfine $4@4 25

OATS—A few lots of the new crop have been received here and have found readier sale. The stocks of last year's yield are getting small and prices have experienced a slight advance. Quotations are furnished at 45@50c ₽ bushel in sacks the latter for choice bright lots.

BARLEY—Transactions have been limited for some days past and brewers offer $1 45 ₽ cwt for best. Common for feed quotable at $1 35@1 40

FEED—We note no change in the market in this article the stocks being comparatively light but fairly supplying the local demand, which is about the only requirement.

HAY—We note the receipt of several large lots which find sale at $10 ₽ ton for baled timothy $9@10 for loose $7 for wild

POTATOES—There is no lack in the supply or varieties. Prices range from 75 to [illegible] bushel

ONIONS—The receipts have materially increased and prices seem tending downward common lots being now quotable at $1@1 25 ₽ 100 lbs, and choice $1 50@1 75

BACON—Hams and shoulders though not so plentiful as sometime ago are yet ready to obtain able but sides are very scarce and firm at quotations. For good country cured we quote Hams 14@16c ₽ lb shoulders 7@10c and sides 11½@12½c

LARD—The demand for a good article of fresh is fair at 14½@15c ₽ lb in kegs or tins.

DRIED FRUIT—The demand for apples is dull and prices have gone down to 4½@5c ₽ lb in sack and 5@5½c in kegs. Plums are unchanged

RIPE FRUITS—The supply is large and quotations must take a wide range. Best apples in boxes $1 Plums 50c ₽ lb peaches 7@10c pears 75c@$1 ₽ box. Apples loose from wagons 50@75c ₽ box.

BUTTER—The current receipts are lessening in volume and prices are gradually advancing. This product has been sold here this season in less quantities than formerly but the average quality has been better. The quotations, however have the usual range—common quotable at 18@22c ₽ lb good roll 25@27c and choice dairy 27@30c

CHEESE—The supply is good and trade in a fair by active state with prices firm at our last quotations

CHICKENS—The supply is not at all excessive and all offering are freely taken at $2 a $3 for spring and $4 and $4 50 for choice grown hens

FRESH MEATS—There is nothing new to note. The market being well supplied at the usual rates which depend very much on the condition of stock offered and wants of the purchaser. Choice beef cattle on foot quotable at 3c ₽ lb, mutton sheep $2, $1 per head. dressed hogs 7c@8 50 ₽ 100 lbs

HIDES—The receipts of the past week have been lighter than usual without any important change in rates

WOOL—We are now between seasons in this staple and but few lots are changing hands. The Ajax will carry a few bales to San Francisco sailing this evening, and this will be nearly the last shipment of the spring clip. Prices are firm at our last given figure
